Sunday Magazine.

The March number opens with No. 3. of Dr. Talmage's interesting papers, "People I have Met," descriptive of Henry Wilson, ex-Vice-President of the United States, with his latest public address, and Dean Stanley. W. C. Gray has an admirable article, "The True Doctrine of Fairplay." The serials, "Prudence Winterburn" and "Margaret's Enemy," are continued, and there several highly interesting short stories, sketches and essays by distinguished writers. The lovers of poetry will be delighted with the variety and unusual excellence of the poems; Augusta Browne Garrett contributes two which will not fail to be particularly noted—"The Heart and World" and "Artist's Farewell to Time." "The Mother with Nine Sons," from the Romance, by H. F. Bramwell, is quaint and original. Besides the usual abundance of entertaining and instructive miscellany, there is "The Collection Basket," "Wit, Wisdom and Pathos of Childhood," etc., etc. A single copy is furnished for 25 cents, and the subscription for a year $3, postpaid. Address, Frank Leslie, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York City.

It is publically stated by various parties who have been to Humboldt recently that the prohibition law is violated in several places in that town. We give this on information only and for what it is worth.—REGISTER, Jan. 27, 1882.

Some people might suppose it would have been a good idea to have had the editor of the REGISTER subpoenaed as a witness on the liquor trial that was had here this week. Two weeks ago, in his paper, he said that they were selling whisky in Humboldt, in violation of law. The general public might have believed him, or at least thought he would prove a valuable witness for the State. Before the case went to trial, the County Attorney waited upon the REGISTER man and desired to get all the information he knew about the case. The attorney told him that the State would make a close and searching investigation, and that he would spare no pains or trouble to bring out all the facts and testimony that could be obtained. If the editor knew of anybody who had bought intoxicating liquor from the defendants, or if he knew what he had charged to be true, the County Attorney had subpoenas signed up by the Justice, and all that was necessary was to insert the names of the witnesses. The editor could not give him a name, nor could he substantiate his own charge. We presume that he was afraid that the law was being violated at Iola and jumped at the conclusion that they were selling liquor in this city. As he could not put up any testimony it is now in order for him to shut up about liquor being sold in Humboldt. It is a clear case of back-down.—Humboldt Union, Feb. 11, 1882.

"Some people might suppose that" a man who occupies a position as editor of a paper would not gratuitously advertise himself as a liar, especially when no cause exists for his so doing. We republish what we said a few weeks ago and then copy the Union article entire, leaving to intelligent men the liberty of drawing their own conclusions as to the kind of a creature the editor of the Union must be.

Mr. Fife never called on us for evidence and has not been in our office to exceed three minutes for the past three months. One day about two weeks ago, he called just as he was on his way to the train and said he had understood we knew of parties that had bought liquor at Humboldt. We told him just what we had told Mr. Davis, of this city, that parties had told us that they knew liquor was being sold at that place, but that of course was of no account to him. We further told him that these same parties would not in our judgment be very valuable witnesses. The statements which the Union says he made about affidavits, etc., Mr. Fife never made to us. In fact we do not think he was in search of "evidence" from us but "dropped in" just as men usually do into a printing office. We shall be pleased to have Mr. Fife state whether we are correct or not.

We are ready at any time to substantiate any statement we make and Mr. Fife will not say we that we refused to substantiate any statement. When he does say so it will be time enough for the Union to say he did.

We seldom "jump at conclusions" but as the Union has been so free to assume that we do, he shall be gratified for once. We conclude that when L. W. Keplinger affirms that certain parties in Humboldt have sold liquor unlawfully, it is possible that it is true. We conclude, when a man like Geo. A. Amos expresses great surprise and says his confidence in certain men is sadly shaken by their testimony in the whisky case then being tried, that some parties must have done some heavy swearing. We conclude, when a town gives a majority for a whisky justice over ex-county treasurer J. B. Young, that the whisky element rules the roost. We conclude, when the organ of that crowd crows so loudly over the failure of the temperance men to make their case "stick" that he represents a goodly number of the people of that city. We conclude the beer-drinking editor of the Union would be a good witness in some whisky cases. We conclude that he could be a decent sort of a fellow if he would. We conclude that he won't because he don't want to.

—And, finally, we conclude that he has not got the moral courage to admit the truth and take a bold stand against the notorious and unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors in Humboldt. His own people admit it, but cannot convict for lack of evidence or because men will not testify against men who sell.

A painter connected with the K. C., L. & S. R. R., passed through Iola Saturday on one of those bicycle cars which are propelled by the wind. While going down grade five or six miles south of Garnett the wind caught the sail throwing him from the track. His leg was broken below the knee and the knee joint wrenched from the socket. He was taken to Garnett for medical attendance.

Off for Texas.

All day we traveled over a red and stone country covered with trees looking very beautiful, but neither timber nor land very valuable. We crossed the survey of the railroad running west from Vinita, about sixteen times since leaving that point. I am told that they have a very fine country, so far as grade goes, to run through. But what they are going to transport into or take out of the country I do not know. If it is true, as I am told, that the Indians are going to order to cattle out of the Territory that belong to non-residents there will be absolutely nothing to ship.

We crossed the Deep Fork and shortly after drove into the Sac and Fox Agency. The Mission, a saw mill, a hotel, a store and two or three other houses made the Agency. There are about four hundred Indians and the Government each year at this point is about $45,000. Here we concluded to go south to Shawnee Town on the North Conacliian, distance about thirty-five miles. Camping two miles out from the Agency we made as usual a good camp and in the morning turned our faces southward. A few miles brought us out on to the open country, and I fear our pleasant drives and camps in the timber have come to a close and we will again have to trust to the cold charities of an open prairie.

I can not blame men who have traveled through for giving a glowing description of the Indian Territory. When the warm sun shines and the grass and foliage are green it must be, to look upon, a paradise. But for practical purposes, such as farming or close grazing it will be a failure, and a very small proportion of the timber will ever be of value. As another day will put us into the Oklahoma country I will devote the remainder of this letter to matters to which my attention has been called.

The inhabitants of the different agencies through which we have passed, though their numbers sound large, yet when it comes to scattering them over the vast domains which have been allotted to them they are scarcely to be found. There are fewer of them than there are of people in Kansas who received aid during the hard times. A very small log cabin with a very small field, or none at all is about all that can be seen in the way of improvements; and these come so few and far between that it is like traveling in an uninhabited country. An Indian wants but little here below and at the rate the full bloods are disappearing he will not want that little long. A very few acres of ground, the Government annuity and the spoils of the chase supply all his wants, and he won't work for anything more. You can not make a white man out of an Indian but you can make an Indian out of a white man. I am of the opinion that the white men who settle Indians and marry a squaw are good material to work on. He soon learns to shirk work, go ragged, live on what he caught, and in a log house without a window, a chimney that smokes, and a front yard that takes in a large part of the nation or a quarter of a mile in every direction. They soon learn to talk about "our land" as glib as an Indian who traces his lineage to the red men who with bloody scalp-knives welcomed the white man to hospitable graves. It is indeed "our land." No man owns the land he lives on, only what improvements he puts there. It is no wonder Indian or white man don't improve. It is too much like going on the land of a father-in-law and improving it; a thing no sensible man ever did.

Now for the stock. The cattle are looking fine and seem to be a very good kind, but I do not think that there is one to every ten thousand acres. It is said that "the cattle upon a thousand hills are his." If the "ranch" is located in the Territory where I came through it needs stocking up badly. The sun never shone upon, the grass never grew on, trees never shaded and water never run through a better cattle country.

I have seen very few horses or sheep; but hogs! well, I never! Ghosts, shadows; a bundle of bones, hair and bristles. We never can see but one end. The other end is way down in the ground. It never looks up. I don't believe if Barnum's big show was to pass they would stop to look at it. The fact is, it is a matter of life or death with them. If they should miss one root or one spear of grass they are goners. I am told that hogs never were so poor before. It is not on account of the failure of corn but of the acorns. I would like to say something about the game, but I do not know anything about it except the tracks and they are too numerous to mention.
